

Joint statement from Sandwell Children's Safeguarding Partnership and Dudley Safeguarding People Partnership

YS Child Safeguarding Practice Review

Publication date: Wednesday 12 January 2022

This Child Safeguarding Practice Review (CSPR) followed an assault on a baby and their mother who both thankfully survived the incident.

This independent review considered systems, practice and processes between partner agencies in the Sandwell and Dudley areas. The primary purpose of this review was to learn lessons and to use the learning to improve and sustain change.

Lesley Hagger, Independent Chair of Sandwell Children's Safeguarding Partnership, and Dr Paul Kingston, Independent Chair of the Dudley Safeguarding People Partnership, said: "This was a disturbing assault which involved a deeply distressing incident for all members the family concerned.

"We would like to thank all professionals in both Sandwell and Dudley and family members who have contributed to this review to help partner organisations continue improving the services and support they provide to children and families.

"Our partnerships accepted and agreed to take forward all the recommendations from this review, with significant work already undertaken."

The learning and recommendations arising from the review are helpful to both Sandwell Children's Safeguarding Partnership and Dudley Safeguarding People Partnership, to improve future multi-agency and cross-border working and safeguarding. Many of the recommendations are already in place and both partnerships will continue to monitor the progress to gain the required assurance that these are all fully implemented.

Actions include ongoing work to ensure effective information sharing across health services, as well as plans to deliver further multi-agency safeguarding training to help professionals with cultural and diversity awareness and understand barriers and challenges that may impact on engagement.

Barnardo's is already delivering the government-approved training across the Black Country on adverse childhood experiences (ACEs).

Work is also well under way to further strengthen and build knowledge and awareness in the community around domestic abuse.

Black Country Women's Aid (BCWA) continues to work closely in both areas with community and faith organisations to raise the profile of how victims of domestic abuse can be supported. This includes a Health & Hard to Reach Manager working with grassroots organisations and building stronger links with partner agencies supporting the community.

The See Something, Do Something campaign continues to raise awareness at a community level, giving people vital information on how they can act if they are concerned about abuse.

Both SCSP and DSPP will be making leadership statements at future meetings, as recommended in the review, to show their commitment to being trauma-informed partnerships.
